ISSUES in AGRICULTURAL and LIFE SCIENCES

Planning on Panama for 2018

COLLEGE INFORMATION

College of Agricultural & Life Sciences

Department of Agricultural Education & Communication
Courses are taught by UF faculty

PROGRAM

Join us in AEC 4065, Issues in Agricultural and Life Sciences, as we study abroad in Belize! This Department of Agricultural Education & Communication course is designed to educate students about major issues in agricultural and life sciences (ALS) and to expose students to a variety of methods used to effectively communicate, inform, and influence decisions about these issues in "real world" ways. One of the major components of this course will be the study abroad opportunity to Belize during spring break (February 27th-March 6th, 2016). While in Belize, you will engage in the Belizean culture while learning about food production, food security, capacity building, water quantity & quality, natural resource conservation, biodiversity, climate change, labor, urban/rural interactions and more.

LOCATION

This program takes place in San Ignacio, Placencia and Hopkins Village, Belize, Central America.

EXCURSIONS

Visit the Belize Zoo, Snorkel in the Gulf of Mexico, hike a Maya archaeological site, and tour agricultural operations (cassava, banana, and seaweed production).

HOUSING

Students will stay at tropical resorts in Belize.

RECOGNIZE and analyze current issues in agricultural and life sciences (ALS)

DISTINGUISH and separate facts, fiction, and opinion

IDENTIFY contentious issues in agricultural and life sciences and facilitate consensus building and conflict management

DEVELOP messages to communicate about contentious issues in agricultural and life sciences using appropriate multimedia and social media
