College of Agricultural and Life Sciences

Department of Agricultural Education and Communication

PROGRAM

Challenge 2050 develops students through several courses with a new approach to education. The Challenge 2050 Experience aims to engage students in trust building, accompaniment, and community development exercises within developing national and global contexts. The Challenge 2050 Project is the only program in the country that leverages the passion and excitement of interdisciplinary undergraduate students in complex adaptive problem solving to mitigate the issues associated with our growing global population.

LOCATION

São Paulo is not only the most populous city in Brazil but in the Southern Hemisphere with a strong influence in international commerce, finance, arts and entertainment. It's extremely multicultural and full of life. There are innumerable art-house cinemas, experimental theaters, bistros, and gourmet restaurants. With an estimated 20 million people living in São Paulo, will give you the experience of a life time.

EXCURSIONS

This program includes a two-day trip to Ilhabela and excursions to Parque do Ibirapuera, the Municipal Market and local highlights.

HOUSING

You will be staying in a home central to São Paulo with approximately two students per room. It's a stylish, comfortable house with air conditioner and a lovely dining area and a lot of space for lounging.

DEVELOP experiential knowledge associated with addressing the challenges of population fluctuation

PRACTICE cultural and intercultural competence in immersive contexts

ENGAGE in trust building, accompaniment, and community development experience within developing global contexts
