

UF IN CROATIA

FOOD & GLOBAL CHANGE | SUMMER A: MAY 27-JUNE 22, 2024

COLLEGE INFORMATION

College of Agricultural & Life Sciences - Dept of Agronomy
College of Liberal Arts & Sciences - Dept of Anthropology
Courses are taught by UF faculty

PROGRAM

This program will provide students with a better understanding of the range of food production and subsistence, from small-scale and historical artisanal systems to modern larger-scale industrial systems. There is a focus on how global change, including climate change, invasive pests and pathogens, sociocultural and land-use change (e.g, urbanization) affect those systems, and the economic, social, and cultural consequences.

LOCATION

Croatia has a blend of Mediterranean, Central European, and Balkan cultures with a history that dates back thousands of years. The combination of Mediterranean and Continental climates provides diverse agricultural production in a relatively small geographic area. The Istrian peninsula in the western part of the country (an hour from Zagreb) has some of the highest quality olive oil, wine, and truffle production in the world. Conversely, the Slavonian region to the east of Zagreb has large-scale production of wheat, corn, and sunflower, and the Mediterranean region to the south produces exceptional wine grapes.

EXCURSIONS

Experiential learning activities will include 3-5 excursions to unique cities, markets, and food production sites (e.g., olive oil production, wine grape agrosystems, etc), including day trips and 2-3 overnight or multi-night trips to the Istrian peninsular of Croatia, Trieste, Italy and Ljubljana, Slovenia.

HOUSING

You will stay in shared accomodations with other students on the program.
