PROGRAM

This program was designed with Animal Science majors in mind, with a focus on dairy production and management, profitability, and the role of culture as it relates to regional cheese production. Students will be directly exposed to farmers, cheese makers, animal science professors, students, and lay people in Italy. The program includes several technical visits, in which students will have tours of various farms and lectures on their production systems. Then students will do tastings, discussions, and reflections after each visit. The program also includes guest speakers at different Italian Universities, in which UF students will listen to top-notch Italian scientists and have an opportunity to discuss and interact with them.

LOCATION

Italy is a world-leader in agriculture, with citrus, dairy, and wine among the most recognized products in the world; think of Mozzarella, Parmigiano, gelato, chianti, etc. In this program, UF students will explore and learn Italy's world-famous agriculture, focusing on dairy production and the science and history of it.

EXCURSIONS

Excursions include day trips to Emilia Romagna to visit producers of Parmigiano Reggiano and Prosciutto di Parma, as well as the Tuscan countryside to visit an olive oil producer, a Cinta Senese pig farm, a Chianina beef farm, a pasta factory, and a vineyard.

HOUSING

You will stay in shared apartments in Florence and 3-star hotels in Rome & Sorrento.
